No joy or pleasure on this earth quite equals that which comes into the home when baby arrives. Who can describe the happiness of man and woman, joined in wedlock, as they look upon the fragile, delicate mite that is blood of their blood

"female troubles" cause it. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription overcomes barrenness by stamping out diseases of women, and by healing and curing ulceration. It tones up the system, stops drains, and restores strength. During gestation it modifies morning sickness, gives elasticity to the overstrained parts concerned, makes the hour of baby's coming short and almost painless, and gives wonderful recuperative power to the patient. By making the mother strong and cheerful, it makes the little one healthy, vigorous and good natured. ANCIENT SEA WALLS.

Punishment That Was Inflicted For Neglecting Their Repair.

W. H. Wheeler in his "History of the Fens of South Lincolnshire" quotes Harrison as saying, in his preface to Holinshed's "Chronicle," that "such as, having walls or banks near unto the sea, do suffer the same to decay, after convenient admountion, whereby the water entereth and drowneth up the country, are by a certain ancient custom apprehended, condemned and staked in the breach, where they remain forever a parcel of the new wall that is to be made upon them, as I have heard reported."-P. 40.

Harrison, so far as I am at present able to make out, is the earliest authority for this, and he only speaks of it as a report.

In a paper by the Rev. F. C. J. Spurrell in "The Archaeologia Cantiana" re-lating to Dartford, I find the following, which, though it is by no means a proof Dainty Breakfast Foods make the statement less improbable than it otherwise would be:

"In early times the Roman way crossed the marsh untroubled by the tide. Afterward, the tide having advanced further inland, the road was raised, becoming a causeway. In mediaeval times this bank was heightened against the tide, the road running inside, as at present. During a section made a few years ago through this road, near Stidolph's house, I saw a human skeleton extended across the bank about two feet below the present surface. This is, of course, a strange situation; but, looking to the fact that it was a tide-wall, it is pos sible that the once owner of the skele ton had the duty of repairing the bank and, having let the tide through by his neglect, was placed in the breach, thus helping to repair it while suffering punishment. S. Smiles has mentioned that such a mode of dealing was a mediaeval custom. However, I know no how far the ancient graveyard extend-

Glassmaking.

Much mystery has in times past attached to the art of glassmaking. It was formerly the custom for the work-men in setting pots in the glass furnace to protect themselves from the heat by dressing in the skins of wild animals from head to foot. To this queer garb were added glass goggle eyes, and thus the most hideous looking monsters were readily presented to the 'efe. Show was made of themselves in the neighborhood, to the infinite alarm of children, old women and others. Johnnie's Choice.

But the Galaxy of Brilliant Pupils Will Shine for Many Days in Pleasing Remembrance.

Not for many a day has Redwood City enjoyed such a hearty good laugh as it did on Tuesday evening last, when the l whole town seems to have crowded into the pretty playhouse on Main street to witness the production of the "Cross-Roads Skule." Never before was the Alhambra filled to such overflowing. The big crowd came to enjoy itself; nor was it disappointed? For two hours and a half the quaint costumes, the oldfashioned recitations, the unique and unexpected antics of the teacher and the pupils on the stage, threw the audience into harmless convulsions. The old gentleman on the ground floor, with gray Deacon Wayback . . . S. P. McCrea hair and silvery locks, enjoyed himself as much as did the small boy in the gallery; and it was no wonder, for the 8 50 ever-ready rod of the teacher, the irrepressible perseverance of the tattler, the mischievous antics of Watermelon Jackson, were such as to appeal to age and youth alike.

It was, in a sense, a typical "crossroads skule," this school that came together in the Alhambra. There was a rustic atmosphere about it all that appeals delightfully to the more urban spirit of these modern days. And beneath it all there was that intangible something that transports you back, in spirit.

Some were rolling hoops, others chasing butterflies, two of the younger boys were playing see-saw, while some of the bigger boys, with elongated limbs and outgrown coat-sleeves, played at leap-frog and other favorite games. Even in this early stage of the proceedings Watermelon Jackson excited the susceptible ire of the master, Zelotus Whackem, and received a vigorous application of the ever-ready rod.

The second scene revealed the school room, with the master at his high desk and the pupils advancing and saluting the teacher in the good old-fashioned way. The master himself was a model of Chesterfieldian propriety, but the influence of his example seemed to have had little effect on the pupils, and especially on the boys, who seemed to vie with each other in their clumsiness. The roll was then called, and with a few child, each of whom have subscribed for exceptions the purils were found to be present. The teacher then announced that the morning song was in order, and every pupil joined lustily in the heart-

DARING OF LIONS.

Incidents to Prove That the Brutes Are Not Cowardly.

It has been said many times that lions are cowardly brutes, but of the many lions with which I have had per sonal dealings, expectedly and unexpectedly, the epithet cowardly is the last I should consider appropriate ir describing them. I have been charged by a lion, and he certainly did not look cowardly. I have come face to face at a distance of some twenty feet, with a family party of half a dozen, fortunately full fed. They stood, with quiet dignity, looking at us, and then slowly moved away, stopping every few yards to stand and look again. There was neither fear nor meanness in their ap

I have seen lions stalking game, and I have myself been stalked by them If I could have encouraged myself with the conviction of their cowardliness when I was the quarry and they the hunters, it would have put a different aspect on the situation. We were at this time living in a station over seven. ty miles from the nearest connecting link with the outside world, and when man eating lions took possession of the one road which led to this link things

A large troop was reported, and the natives maintained that this troop ran along in the grass parallel with the caravan road (a path some ten inches wide), and, having selected the most edible member of the caravan, jumped upon him like a flash, and, seizing him. disappeared as quickly as they came. Our mail runners, attached to whom were a couple of native police armed with rifles, were several times attacked. Finally, as the wail party was camping one night, fortunately for it with a native caravan, the lions be came so bold that, in spite of fires, they sprang upon a native and carried him off into the bush .- Mrs. S. WASHING CLOCK FACES.

Some Timepleces Grow Soiled More Quickly Than Others.

"I've been washing the faces of the city clocks nigh on to ten years, I guess," said a pleasant Scotch-Irish-American, "and before that I did it in the old country. There aren't many face washers in this land, and the few who know the business do well at it." He looked prosperous in his tweed suit and derby hat.

"Is your work anything like that of the steeple climber?" he was asked. "Bless you, no," he replied, with twinkling eye, much amused, "only in one thing, and that is that mostly sailors take up with the trade. That's because we're good climbers, you know. I've washed the faces of city and church clocks that were 180 feet from the ground, and it took me two and three weeks to do it. I'm a practical clock repairer, too-have to be, you know-and do my work in a huge wooden cradle made for the purpose Some clocks get their faces dirty in a year or so; others remain clean ter years, and so on. Old Ben, Westmin ster's great clock, is expected to keer | SUMMER AND FALL PATTERNS

'In the old days the trade was more dangerous. We used to work from scaffolds and got many dangerous falls. Now we have the cradles and all the fixings and comforts, and if a mankeeps his head he can work as well as on the curb. How is the pay? Well, that's hard to figure, for we work by the job. We don't clean clock faces in winter, so we make enough in the summer to last the year round. Of course sometimes the clocks are taken out of their cases and repaired in the shops. Last year I cleared $2,000 and visited only two other cities, Chicago and Boston. This year I'll make more. because building operations have grimed the clocks and given our trade a lift."-New York Post.
